Chief Financial Officer Brian Amtmann was recently recognized as one of Long Island’s top financial executives by Long Island Business News. In over 3 years of Jefferson’s Ferry, Brian has pursued aggressive cost cutting strategies that have positively impacted the organization’s bottom line without compromising the high standard of living that residents expect or the compensation packages that help attract and retain top employees.

“Brian’s vigilant cost cutting measures have had a huge impact on our budgets, without sacrificing the high quality of our programs and services,” said Bob Caulfield. “With his strong background in the financial management of continuing care and other types of retirement communities, Brian has significantly reduced our expenses for insurance and accounting fees. Also through his efforts, Jefferson’s Ferry earned an upgraded BBB+ bond credit rating with Fitch Ratings which helped in refinancing our corporation’s outstanding bonds to a lower interest rate. He has improved our financial performance in industry financial ratios every year since he started at Jefferson’s Ferry.”

Thanks in great part to Brian’s oversight, in the past 3 years, Jefferson’s Ferry’s residents have experienced their lowest monthly fee increase ever, less than 3%. Adjusted annually, this fee provides the financial resources to fund services and amenities that residents enjoy—health services, utilities, household maintenance, dining options, entertainment, and educational and social programs.

In its latest report, FitchRatings pointed to the continuation of key drivers that sustained the BBB+ rating. Solid occupancy in Independent Living, Assisted Living and Skilled Nursing, improved liquidity levels, improved operational performance and a light debt burden were all cited as significant factors.

Jefferson’s Ferry recently had its BBB+ rating affirmed by FitchRatings for the second year in a row. “We are extremely pleased that FitchRatings once again rated us as ‘bbb+’,” said Bob Caulfield. “This solid investment grade rating has enabled us to continue to maintain and improve our physical plant and introduce many new services that benefit the entire community.”

In November 2016, Jefferson’s Ferry issued $45-million in bonds through the Town of Brookhaven Local Development Corporation after receiving its first rating of BBB+ by Brookhaven Local Development Corporation. The bonds allowed Jefferson’s Ferry to reduce its debt load and to embark on improvements throughout the community including resident living and activities spaces, fitness and wellness areas and areas serving older adults living with dementia.

As the days grow longer and the outdoors comes into flower, I’d like to share some exciting news with you. Jefferson’s Ferry has been selected to take part in this year Age Well Study that will look at the effects of life plan community living on residents’ long term health and wellness.

Although residents of Jefferson’s Ferry and other life plan communities are routinely asked about their satisfaction with their life plan lifestyle choice, there has never been a large-scale national study that has captured the larger impact on health and wellness over a long time span.

The study will measure the self-reported health and wellness of resident volunteers through a survey administered every year of the study. This data will be compared to data collected from older adults who do not live in life plan communities. An organizational survey of life plan community living on residents’ long term health and wellness.

As you might well imagine, as CEO of Jefferson’s Ferry, I amc ontributing the benefits of the life plan community promise and as an organization, Jefferson’s Ferry takes great pride in providing an active lifestyle for our residents that encompasses the five critical elements of healthy living: Good nutrition, intellectual stimulation, physical health, safety and security, and socialization.
